

On the Main Line

ML Chamber's 'What Not to Wear' benefits Main Line Animal Rescue

WAYNE — The Main Line Society of Professional Women (SPW), a program of the Main Line Chamber of Commerce, hosted an after-work event titled "What Not to Wear" on May 13 at the Radisson Valley Forge in King of Prussia.

SPW teamed up with Kristel Closets, celebrity make-up artist Béke Beau and Bubbles Salon to help three lucky Chamber members enhance their professional image. Winners were featured at the event, each given their own segment to reveal their new looks to the audience. The makeover process was filmed in advance by Media Wave Video Productions and photographed by Campli Photography and the footage was shown at the event so that all who attended could benefit from the tips and techniques offered by image experts. Clothing was provided by Elizabeth Maar Boutique.

The featured nonprofit was Main Line Animal Rescue, which rescues and finds homes for hundreds of unwanted companion animals each year. It is also proud to be a no-kill shelter. Over 150 items were donated by attendees to Main Line Animal Rescue, such as Milk-Bone dog biscuits, cat food, etc. Maria Rankin of Wachovia, a Wells Fargo company, presented a check for $1,000 to Bill Smith, founder of Main Line Animal Rescue, at the event. "Thank you so much. This donation comes at a perfect time," said Smith, who will be putting the money towards a recent rescue's jaw surgery.

Maria Rankin of Wachovia (left) and Eileen Connolly-Robbins, executive vice president and chief operating officer of the Main Line Chamber of Commerce, present a check for $1,000 to Bill Smith, founder of Main Line Animal Rescue, at the Main Line Society of Professional Women event "What Not to Wear" on May 13.